Get More Math (GMM) is uniquely powerful math practice software for grades 4th through high school. Many math software products provide individualized instruction, but Get More Math (GMM) takes a different approach: adaptive cumulative practice to ensure long-term retention. As a result, students using GMM score significantly higher than their peers on standardized tests. Improve Math Retention: Concept mastery and long-term retention; Math practice for grades 4 through high school math; More time for instruction with automated practice; Adaptive, cumulative practice tailored to each student; Real-time data diagnoses for individuals and classes.

More Student Interaction: GMM is designed to complement instruction, NOT replace it. Opportunities for personal teacher-student interaction are built into the system. Initial Concept Mastery: The teacher chooses each day's focus area. Students stay focused on the new concept until they gain initial understanding, then automatically transition to mixed review. Long-Term Retention: Math practice sessions include both new material and review of old concepts. More types of problems may be selected by the teacher as students progress. Automate Routine Tasks: Custom tests can be created quickly, grading is automated, and real-time reporting offers current analytics for timely intervention opportunities. Concept Breadth & Depth: Covering grades 5 through Algebra 1, Get More Math features over 2,000 types of problems with millions of dynamically generated variations. Engaging User Interface: Progress icons keep students motivated to advance their skills, and rewards of games and chat time provide brain breaks. Find out more at: <https://www.GetMoreMath.com/>

Population Health Innovations, Inc. (PHI) is the software-as-a-service (SAAS) provider of Health eTools, an electronic medical record program used for health services in schools. PHI uses an approach to health that aims to improve the health of all students, staff, and families by tracking the health outcomes of their students from PreK through 12th grade. The program tracks health screenings, daily visits to the nurse's office, medication delivery, immunizations, and other essential health outcomes for students and staff in school. Our immunization tracker is CDC compliant. PHI's primary objective is to provide the tools that track and report health outcomes of students. Our vision for the future is to promote additional resources that reduce health inequities and disparities in schools; so that students can achieve better academically. Social determinants of health, such as social, environmental, cultural, and physical disparities have a tremendous impact on students throughout their lives. Through our work, we aim to help schools across the United States expand revenue opportunities that bolster health services in schools and lead to healthier brighter academic futures for students.

In 1995, we formally initiated YouthLight to publish and market cutting-edge resources for professional caregivers. Currently, we are devoting all our efforts to help YouthLight support care-giving professionals in their work to help young people. We strive to address the current issues facing counselors and other care-giving professionals. We continually work to develop and promote best-practices and preventive and strengths-based approaches to helping young people. We welcome any suggestions or ideas on how we can better help you and your work.
